INFORMATION

The 100 Black Men of London is a community-based charity led by Black men delivering programmes and activities focused on Mentoring, Education, Economic Empowerment, and Health & Wellness. We have been serving our community since 2001, and impacting thousands of lives through the work we do.

It's been 14 years since the initial launch of 100 Great Black Britons, when in 2004, Mary Seacole was voted the Greatest Black Briton of all time. Every Generation Media, in partnership with Sugar Media Marketing Limited, are relaunching 100 Great Black Britons in 2017. Over the last decade there has been increasing demand for a follow up campaign and list; however, in the wake of the Brexit referendum decision, the 100 Great Black Britons campaign is even more important than ever, to ensure the continued legacy and achievement of Black people in Britain. Furthermore, during the last 14 years, academics and independent scholars have discovered new Black British historical figures, and there has been an emergence of new role models and icons since 2004. The campaign will also provide an opportunity for reassessment and reflection what makes a Great Black Briton and how do we recognise unsung heroes who may not have the profile and the coverage about their impact and legacy? We believe the new campaign has the potential to further educate, inform and advance the contribution of Black people in Britain and inspire a new generation of role models and achievers.

The 1001 Critical Days manifesto highlights the importance of intervening early in the 1001 critical days between conception to age 2 to enhance the outcomes for children. The Conception to Age 2: First 1001 Days All Party Parliamentary Group and the wider 1001 Critical Days Movement work together to raise awareness of the importance of this life stage and the important role that early relationships play in children's development. We bring together parliamentarians from across parties, charities, professionals, academics and families, to speak with a united voice about the importance of early life and to advocate for policy changes to support babies and their families.

1001 Inventions is an award-winning international science and cultural heritage organisation that raises awareness of the creative golden age of Muslim civilisation that stretched from Spain to China.

The Spitalfields Centre charity (registered charity 287279) was set up to preserve 19 Princes Street, and to create there a permanent exhibition and educational resource telling the stories of the many diverse peoples and cultures who created our society.

After World War 2, the British government agreed to take in 1,000 orphaned child survivors of the Nazi concentration camps. Only 732 could be found. They were flown to special hostels set up in the UK for their rehabilitation and recovery. They built successful new lives and forged a lifelong bond as members of an extraordinary extended family. Even though there were 80 girls among them, they are known collectively as The Boys. In 1963 they established the '45 Aid Society to raise money for charitable causes, give back to society and to look after each other. The society organises an annual events including Reunion Dinner, a Hanukkah Party and an annual memorial lecture.

Acas (Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service) provides free and impartial information and advice to employers and employees on all aspects of workplace relations and employment law. We support good relationships between employers and employees which underpin business success. But when things go wrong we help by providing conciliation to resolve workplace problems.

Focus on equality and discrimination in the workplace.
ACEVO is the Association of Chief Executives of Voluntary Organisations. ACEVO was formed in 1987 and together with their network they inspire and support civil society leaders through connection, skills and influence. Their members include the leaders of small, community based groups, ambitious medium-sized organisations, and well known, well-loved national and international not-for-profits.
Three and a half years after the murder of George Floyd, and considerable attention in civil society to racism and anti-racism, too little has changed in day-to-day experience for Black and Minoritised Ethnic people in mainstream civil society. This report is released by ACEVO and Voice4Change England and authored by Dr. Sanjiv Lingayah, co-creator of the Home Truths 2 programme, and based on a survey of Black and Minoritised Ethnic people with current or recent experience of working in UK mainstream civil society which ran online from 17 July to 12 October 2023.
We work on rights, equality and development for Southern Africa raising public awareness of the region and the causes behind the complex issues it faces. We seek to do distinctive work that contributes to making a positive and lasting difference. We stand in solidarity with the people of Southern Africa and promote friendship, partnership and cooperation.
Actors for Human Rights was founded in 2006 and is a network of more than 700 professional actors across the UK who are dedicated to drawing public attention to human rights concerns. We respond to requests for rehearsed readings of our documentary plays and can go anywhere at any time.
The Admiral Nurse Dementia Helpline is for anyone with a question or concern about dementia. From looking out for the first symptoms of Alzheimer's, to understanding the challenges of living with someone with vascular dementia, our specialist Admiral Nurses have the knowledge and experience to understand the situation and suggest answers that might be hard to find elsewhere.
Adonis & Abbey Publishers Ltd, a niche publisher of non-fiction books and academic journals was incorporated in the United Kingdom in March 2003 and has published well over 160 books since then. In 2004, the company also began publishing peer-reviewed academic journals. There were two main motivating objectives for this – to address the problem of the high mortality rate of academic journals published by Africans and to let African scholars set and own their research agenda rather than constantly anticipating the needs of the foreign donor agencies that normally fund the publication of their journals.
Advance HE is a member-led charity of and for the education sector that works with partners across the globe to improve higher education for staff, students and society.
Understand how to make staff and students feel comfortable disclosing equality information.
Intersectionality recognises that people's identities and social positions are shaped by multiple factors and our new short guide covers: a) Why intersectionality is important? b) Intersectional approaches to research design c) Intersectional approaches to qualitative equality research d) Intersectional approaches to quantitative equality research and data analysis e) Useful resources
The Advisory Council for the Education of Romany and other Travellers (ACERT) was founded in 1973 by Lady Plowden, Tom Lee, the General Secretary of the Romany Guild and others from Gypsy and other communities. Lady Plowden had chaired the major Government study "Children and their Primary Schools" in 1967, which found that Gypsy children had the worst access to Education of any group. ACERT was primarily a campaigning and lobbying organisation, initially on Educational issues.

The Aegis Trust is an international organization working to prevent genocide. Aegis honours the memory of the victims of genocide and enables students, professionals, decision-makers and a wider public to meet survivors and learn from their experiences.
The Afghan Association of London was established in February 1995 to assist Afghan refugees with their integration into UK society. As a centre point for the Afghan community, the Association provides a wide range of practical help, support and advice.
ACGB is the first and leading national council of British Afghan community in United Kingdom affiliated with regional public, private and nongovernmental organisations from across England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. As an independent, non-political and non-profit organisation, we represent and protect, the hopes, aspirations and interests of the British Afghan community in the country, ensure full participation of the community in British public life. We promote consultation, cooperation and collaboration on Afghan affairs in United Kingdom.
Afghan Online Press provides updated daily news on Afghanistan. It is part of the larger Afghanistan Online website. Most of the news we post come from public domain sources (ex. VOA, Press TV, etc) or we have agreements/permissions from the authors/sources. For others, an external link is provided to read the article.
Afghanstudents.co.uk, is for Afghan Students living in United Kingdom. Our mission is to present help and information to the younger generation of Afghan Students who are living and studying in different parts of the UK.
ACAA was established in 2001 by Dr Nooralhaq Nasimi, who left Afghanistan with his young family in 1999. Dr Nasimi wanted to help other refugees, so he began organising cultural events and day trips for the Afghan community in London. Since then, the organisation has flourished and since developed into a vibrant organisation working to free refugees and newcomers from the isolating feelings which can come with migration.
Africa Advocacy Foundation (AAF) is a registered charity founded in 1996 with the aim of supporting and empowering vulnerable and disadvantaged people. We are a community-led initiative that aims to equip diaspora communities and marginalised peoples with the tools they need to find health, safety, prosperity and opportunity to lead fulfilling and happy lives. AAF works with communities both in the UK and overseas who are affected by a range of issues including sexual and reproductive health, violence against women and girls, female genital mutilation (FGM) and mental health issues. We provide information, advocacy, advice, practical support and training through our a range of projects and partnership activities.
ACMA aims to connect and support African Caribbean doctors, medical students and aspiring medical students.
The African Caribbean Community Initiative (ACCI) is a holistic and comprehensive support service for the African Caribbeans affected by mental ill health. Our services include supported housing and advice, day opportunities facilities and specialist outreach. We also provide an extensive and holistic counselling and therapeutic service and facilitate a dedicated and proactive Carers' Support Group.
ACLT is a 30+ times award winning charity committed to providing hope to patients living with blood cancer and illnesses where a matched donor (stem cell, blood or organ) is required to save a life. Our work is driven by a belief that no one should die waiting for a donor to become available. Through our work, we improve odds of finding matches by registering potential donors en masse from all ethnicities, with a focus on donors from the African and Caribbean communities. This is due to an extreme shortage of potential African and Caribbean donors. We also provide support and advice to patients and their families throughout treatment, from diagnosis to recovery and sadly (in some cases), while supporting the patient and family during 'end of life': where treatments have not been successful.

AHPN works to improve the health and wellbeing of the UK's African population and to reduce health inequalities. We do this by influencing health policies, to ensure that the health needs of Africans are recognised and addressed in a meaningful way. We also work to identify and address the wider determinants of health and the causes of health inequalities.
Africans Unite against Child Abuse (AFRUCA) was established in May 2001 as a platform for advocating for the rights and welfare of African children following the deaths of children like Victoria Climbié, Jude Akapa and Damilola Taylor in the UK. It became a registered Charity in July 2002 and a Company Limited by Guarantee in October 2001 with a Board of Directors appointed to run the organization.
Here you will meet 52 composers, conductors and instrumental performers - Africans, African Americans and Afro-Europeans.
Against All Odds is an internet-based game putting players through the experience of being a refugee. It was developed for UNHCR in 2006.
Age UK is a registered charity in the United Kingdom, formed on 25 February 2009, and launched on 1 April 2009, which combines the operations of the previously separate charities Age Concern and Help the Aged to form the UK's largest charity for older people. Age UK's vision is to make the UK a great place to grow older. We do this by inspiring, supporting and enabling in a number of ways.
Information and advice about illnesses that affect people in later life, such as dementia, osteoporosis and hearing loss.
Find out your rights and how you are protected from discrimination.
For more than one hundred years the Ahmadiyya Muslim community has been leading a peaceful revival of Islam. From the time it was founded in India in 1889 it has enjoyed an unrivalled record for peace and for its efforts to build cohesive societies. Established in the UK since 1913, we built London's first mosque in 1926 (The London Mosque in Putney). We now have one hundred branches across Britain and have opened a number of mosques including the landmark Baitul Futuh mosque in south London, which is the largest in western Europe. A community that stands for education, integration and interfaith peace we welcome all to visit our mosques as well as our numerous seminars and events that bring people together to understand more about each other. We are also committed to helping others, engaging local communities and working for the common good. On this we have a long history of raising millions of pounds for British Charities.
The words "Aik Saath" mean "Together As One" in Hindi, Punjabi and Urdu. They also embody the ethos of our charity. We believe in working together for positive social change. Our mission is to work with people from all communities, faiths and backgrounds to promote and encourage conflict resolution and community cohesion through training, campaigns and projects.
AIMS was founded in 1960 by Sally Willington to support women and families to achieve the birth that they wanted. Since the 1960s we have campaigned tirelessly for improvements to the UK's maternity services, as well as supporting women and families directly through our helpline, and sharing information to pregnant people and health carers with our hugely informative books, Journal and website resources. AIMS works towards better births for all by campaigning and information sharing, protecting human rights in childbirth and helping women to know their rights, whatever birth they want, and wherever they want it.
The AIRE Centre is a specialist charity whose mission is to promote awareness of European law rights and assist marginalised individuals and those in vulnerable circumstances to assert those rights.

The aims of the Aisling Project are: Reaching out to Irish people who are vulnerable, isolated and alone; Providing supported holidays in Ireland for long-term emigrants, fulfilling what is for many a dream of seeing their homeland again; Helping long-term emigrants reconnect with their families and friends; Helping long-term emigrants resettle in Ireland; Offering a friendly supportive service in an environment that encourages self-worth and personal development; Building trust in order to develop future support and continuing friendship.
Founded in 1979 by the legendary Tara Rajkumar, Akademi has been taking South Asian dance to unexpected places ever since. In that time, we have redefined the parameters of the art form itself. We have inspired audiences, developed artists and changed lives. Our passion burns brighter than ever. We are dynamic and future facing. We connect South Asian dance with the wider contemporary arts sector. We engage with social, political and cultural agendas to achieve real impact. We embrace the plurality of classical, contemporary and commercial South Asian dance styles. Rooted in our local community but active across the UK, we have a global perspective with worldwide connections. Our pioneering work contributes significantly to Britain's international reputation for innovation in South Asian dance.
akt is a voluntary organisation based in England, created in 1989 to serve lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender young people who are homeless, living in a hostile environment or in housing crisis. It started in Greater Manchester in 1989 and opened in London in 1996, and expanded to Newcastle in 2013.

Many of the barriers relating to inclusion are the same as those that impact trial design and healthcare delivery generally. However, the presentation of these barriers among different under-served groups may be unique to each population's particular circumstances, background, and needs. Based on the literature, the authors make 15 recommendations that, if implemented, may help improve inclusion within clinical trials and clinical research more generally.

This guidance document presents four key recommendations for designing and running trials that include the ethnic groups needed by the trial. These are (1) ensure eligibility criteria and recruitment pathway do not limit participation in ways you do not intend, (2) ensure your trial materials are developed with inclusion in mind, (3) ensure staff are culturally competent and (4) build trusting partnerships with community organisations that work with ethnic minority groups.

This paper outlines a novel community-led methodology – a community sandpit – to address the inclusion of ethnic groups in public involvement in research, reports on its evaluation, findings, legacy and impact.

Centre for Mental Health is a charity with over 30 years' experience in providing life changing research, economic analysis and policy influence in mental health. Over the last decade, our work has expanded to include physical health, wellbeing, inequality and multiple disadvantage across the life course.

The Covid-19 pandemic is being accompanied by a substantial rise in demand for mental health services. Whilst investment in mental health services is vital, it is also necessary to tackle the factors that cause and worsen mental ill health in the first place. Poverty, economic inequality and mental health, by Ed Davie, explores evidence about the links between these factors, showing that living in poverty increases people's risk of mental health difficulties, and that more unequal societies have higher overall levels of mental ill health. The briefing also demonstrates that poverty and economic inequality intersect with structural racism to undermine the mental health of racialised and marginalised groups in society. The evidence is clear that poverty, deprivation and economic inequality are toxic to mental and physical health. Policy makers need to prioritise reducing them as an urgent public health necessity. The briefing calls for concerted and concrete actions to improve mental health by increasing the incomes and reducing the costs of the poorest people in society. These include increasing benefits and paying the Living Wage, help with housing and childcare costs for the least well-off, and improving access to vital services in the most deprived areas.

Manifesto for a mentally healthier nation calls on all political parties to commit to a ten-year, cross-government plan for mental health, and to include commitments to the following in their manifestoes ahead of the forthcoming general election: Prevention, Equality and Support.

This map tool draws from the latest data to show prevalence of mental health difficulties across the UK, including rates of eating disorders and self-harm, hospital admissions and secondary care referrals, and wider factors such as loneliness, school absence and bullying. It reveals stark disparities in children's mental health across the four nations of the UK and between local areas.

Research suggests that Muslims face some of the greatest mental health inequalities, yet too many encounter significant barriers to support. This fact sheet, developed in partnership with the Woolf Institute, brings together the latest available evidence on Muslim mental health across the life course. It highlights the urgent need to tackle the stark inequalities in Muslims' access to, experience of and outcomes from mental health services. This will require the NHS working closely with community groups to roll out more culturally- and faith-informed mental health support, and better data collection to improve our understanding of the challenges and progress in this area.

Ethnic minorities are underrepresented in clinical research and that needs to change. But first, it’s important to understand why this is happening. And where better to start than with speaking to real people across a wide range of cultures and religions to get their thoughts, feelings and experiences? This report reveals insights from the people, within the UK, themselves and discusses the starting points for overcoming current challenges.
Recent research has revealed that racial and ethnic minorities make up 39% of the population in the US, but estimated rates of clinical trial participation for these groups range from 2% to 16%. Demand Diversity is a call to action to improve the lack of diversity in clinical trials, by speaking with individuals from ethnic minority groups and understanding their motivations and barriers to taking part in clinical trials. In 2020, Demand Diversity gathered insights from ethnic minority groups in the UK to hear their opinions on clinical trials. In 2021, they conducted more research, but this time, among ethnic minority groups in the US. They want to help build evidence through their research that diversity in clinical trials is an issue, then use the insights for us all to work towards solutions and give a voice to people from ethnic minority groups.

'Being disabled in Britain' is a review into disability inequality in Great Britain, offering comprehensive evidence on whether our society lives up to its promise to be fair to all its citizens. It builds on the Equality and Human Rights Commission's statutory five-yearly report on equality and human rights progress in England, Scotland and Wales, 'Is Britain Fairer? The state of equality and human rights 2015.' This review also draws on new quantitative data analysis and our submission to the UN Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, published in February 2017, to present a fuller and more up-to-date examination of the key challenges facing disabled people in Britain.
The EHRC have published their business plan for 2024-25 which describes the major projects they'll deliver in the coming year. Some of the proposed work includes tackling sexual harassment in the workplace, supporting change in uniformed services, regulating artificial intelligence and tackling digital exclusion. These plans will continue the core strategic goal, which is to make a real, lasting, positive difference to the lives of people across Britain as the regulator for equality and a National Human Rights Institution (NHRI).

The most comprehensive review of how Britain is performing on equality and human rights. It provides a complete picture of people's life chances in Britain today.

Advice and guidance relating to Equality Impact Assessments (for the Welsh context).

EHRC carried out an inquiry to assess the treatment and experiences of lower-paid ethnic minority workers in health and social care, particularly during the COVID-19 pandemic. They found:
incomplete data on lower-paid ethnic minority workers, particularly in adult social care different treatment and experiences at work commissioning and outsourcing leading to poor pay and insecure work low awareness of employment rights fear of raising concerns and a lack of mechanisms to do so
They have published a report about our findings, including their recommendations for change.

These factsheets highlight the key facts and statistics from the Equality and Human Rights Monitor. The factsheets for living standards, health and education are drawn from the domains in our Measurement Framework. These relate to six areas of life, which are: 1) education 2) work 3) living standards 4) health 5) justice and personal security 6) participation. There are separate factsheets for Wales and Scotland where policy areas are devolved. Factsheets for the work, participation and justice and personal security domains will be published at a later date.

Religion or belief: a guide to the law' provides an overview of the protections offered by the Equality Act 2010 and the Human Rights Act 1998 of people with or without a religion or belief. It answers commonly asked questions such as what is indirect discrimination and can it ever be justified, and how much employers are expected to know about religion or belief in order to fulfil their legal obligations

This guide is for service providers (anyone who provides goods, facilities or services to the public) who are looking to establish and operate a separate or single-sex service.

The Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC) commissioned Learning and Work Institute (L&W) to explore the major drivers of changes in the world of work and analyse the equality and human rights implications for groups with different protected characteristics in Britain.

17th August 2023: The Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC) has today warned of the consequences of continuing inaction from governments in addressing problems faced by disabled people. In a new report submitted to the United Nations (UN), the EHRC warns that many disabled people continue to face discrimination in the UK, and the situation continues to worsen, particularly in light of current cost-of-living pressures.

This report informs the UK's upcoming examination by the UN. In it the EHRC recognise the steps taken in response to COVID-19 and to protect people's rights more widely. These are signs of action that give hope for a better and fairer future. But their report also issues a challenge. More must be done to promote a society that values dignity and respect for all, ensuring all people are treated fairly by our laws and institutions. The EHRC make 29 recommendations across 11 policy areas to help the UK and Welsh governments meet that challenge. These include ensuring that any reform of the Human Rights Act does not weaken protections for individuals, that social care policy – including proposed reforms – measurably enhances the rights of people with care needs, and that efforts are increased to tackle gaps in educational attainment across protected characteristic groups. It is vital that, in Britain as elsewhere, human rights continue to provide a standard to be observed in all sectors and in all communities, so we can keep working confidently towards a fairer society.

The Equality Trust works to improve the quality of life in the UK by reducing economic inequality. UK income inequality is among the highest in the developed world and evidence shows that this is bad for almost everyone.

Report published for World Mental Health Day 2024 with BLAM, which looks at how racial trauma feeds into our mental health system, how the system fails to address it, and how we can move towards a more equitable mental health system. With this report, we're asking policy-makers, healthcare practitioners, and communities to imagine a mental health system that is grounded in anti-racism, equity, and transformative justice. This is not just about reforming current practices; it's about rebuilding systems of care that genuinely heal and empower us.

We believe that a good and strong society is a just and inclusive one. One where we are free from harm and can all contribute and flourish, whoever we are. Equally Ours (previously the Equality and Diversity Forum) is a UK charity that brings together people and organisations working across equality, human rights and social justice to make a reality of these in everyone's lives. Through our members and networks, we join up research, policy and communications to shift public opinion and policy in positive and powerful ways.

A core responsibility of the NHS is to maintain the highest standards of safety and effectiveness of medical devices currently available for all patients within its care. Evidence has emerged, however, about the potential for racial and ethnic bias in the performance of some medical devices commonly used in the NHS, and that some ethnic groups may receive suboptimal treatment as a result. Beyond racial and ethnic bias, there may be further unfair biases in performance, including by sex and socio-economic status. This Independent Review was tasked by the Secretary of State for Health and Social Care with establishing the extent and impact of potential racial, ethnic and other factors leading to unfair biases in the design and use of medical devices and to make recommendations for improvements. Our recommendations were derived from a review of the scientific evidence and extensive engagement activities with both the developers and regulators of medical devices on the one hand, and users and evaluators of the devices in the NHS on the other, including the ultimate users: patients and the public.

The barriers with Roma, Gypsy and Traveller people face in modern Britain have been laid bare in unprecedented survey data, which reveals extremely high levels of racial assault, poor health, precarious employment and socioeconomic deprivation.
Paper Prepared By The UK Sikh Healthcare Chaplaincy Group. Edited September 2011.
Their journalism explores bold approaches to public health, with a rigorous focus on what works, what doesn't, and why. They support public health leaders, policy makers, advocates, and researchers in improving lives, erasing inequities, and driving societal change.

The 'Unequal Treatment' report of 2003 found unequivocally that individual bias, as well as stereotyping and prejudice, even if unconscious, had a consistent negative impact on non-White patients. The hope was that this report would mark a monumental change in the industry — triggering effective training for all, and narrowing health disparities — but did it? The short answer is: not really. Although lots has changed in the last 20 years, and we see an increasing awareness of the importance of equitable care, the same problems still persist through healthcare and the clinical research industry.
They are the UK's national institute for health data science. They are uniting the UK's health data to enable discoveries that improve people's lives. Analysis on health's relationship with neighbourhoods and communities is due to be added to the hub soon.
Produced by the Health Foundation's Real Centre in partnership with the University of Liverpool, this report aims to support policymakers prepare for the future by looking at patterns of illness over the next two decades. The analysis lays out the potential scale and impact of the growth in the number of people living with major illness as the population ages, assigning scores to 20 conditions based on how likely the illness is to affect people's use of primary care and emergency health services and likelihood of death.
This report is the second output from the REAL Centre's programme of research with the University of Liverpool. Building on the projections in Health in 2040, this report is one of the first studies to unpack patterns of inequalities in diagnosed illness by socioeconomic deprivation across England and project them into the future.
Life expectancy is widely used as an indicator of population health. Inequalities in how long people live are often described in terms of various socioeconomic factors (eg income, education), demographic characteristics (eg ethnicity, sex), geographical areas or inclusion health groups (eg people experiencing homelessness). Although life expectancy is often compared across countries, less well known is how inequalities in life expectancy within the UK compare with those in other countries. Comparing the extent of inequalities between countries is complex, but it can be useful and may help policymakers to identify policies that could reduce inequalities in health.

Health inequalities are complex and growing, yet firm evidence on their extent and trajectory is few and far between. There is a vital need to quantify health inequalities in order to better focus policies designed to address them. This analysis uses a novel approach to explore the extent of diagnosed health inequalities across different population groups in England. We use the Cambridge Multimorbidity Score, developed by clinicians and academics, to assess the relative impact of different patterns of illness on people and their health care needs. Our access to patient data linking primary care and hospital records allows us to provide a more detailed picture of variations in diagnosed illness by age, socioeconomic status, ethnicity and region in England.

Identifying the key issues and assessing how young people are doing in the 2010s. Dated June 2018.

This report commissioned by the Health Foundation and produced by the University of Newcastle and University of Strathclyde in partnership with Health Equity North examines how targets have been used in the past to address health inequalities and how they could be used in the future. It is part of an area of work by the Health Foundation examining how policymakers can take a whole-government approach to improving health.

If you hear voices HVN can help – we are committed to helping people who hear voices. Our reputation is growing as the limitations of a solely medical approach to voices become better known. Psychiatry traditionally refers to hearing voices as ‘auditory hallucinations’ but research shows that there are many explanations for hearing voices. Many people begin to hear voices as a result of extreme stress or trauma. We offer information, support and understanding to people who hear voices and those who support them.

INCLUDE is an initiative from the UK's National Institute for Health Research (NIHR) that aims to improve trial delivery for underserved groups. The INCLUDE Ethnicity Framework aims to help trial teams think carefully about which ethnic groups should be included in their trial for its results to be widely applicable, and what challenges there may be to making this possible. Having identified potential challenges, the trial team can then consider ways to reduce those challenges. For this to work best, the Framework needs to be used at the trial design stage before funding is in place.
This framework has been designed to aid researchers, who are designing clinical trials, to consider barriers to including patients from socioeconomically disadvantaged backgrounds in their trial. The framework can also help researchers to develop strategies to attempt to address such barriers in order to improve the design and conduct of clinical research. Although this framework was developed with UK-based clinical trials in mind, aspects may also be relevant to different types of research and research conducted in populations outside of the UK. Whilst this framework focuses on socioeconomic disadvantage, the list of underserved groups in clinical research is extensive and researchers need to be aware of this when identifying barriers to research and developing to strategies to address barriers.

The course covers reviewing in all contexts for NIHR research funding programmes, plus skills and activities required at different levels and stages of research. It is designed for public contributors who are committee members as well as public reviewers. Researchers may also find this resource useful when writing research funding applications. It can be used as a tool to understand how to get your Patient and Public Involvement right first time! The course is online and freely available on this page. Each module is also available as an accessible version, to download as a pdf or as a powerpoint version.

New research published in a recent report has found that Travelling Showman (Fairground) communities face numerous challenges in accessing healthcare services, which has led to limited awareness of risk factors associated with commonly reported health conditions such as diabetes, arthritis and cardio-vascular disease and low participation in preventative screening associated with their highly mobile lifestyle. The report highlighted that there is a lack of professional knowledge of the population's lifestyle and their absence from healthcare datasets exacerbates these disparities, resulting in significant inequalities in healthcare outcomes.

This health inequalities assessment toolkit (HIAT) has been developed to make sure that all our activities have the potential to contribute to reducing inequalities in health.

The NIHR has published a range of new equality, diversity and inclusion (EDI) data. It provides the most detailed picture of the UK's health research sector produced to date. The data covers the year 2021-22 and updates data that were first published last year. For the first time, they have also reported on the diversity of randomised control trial (RCT) participants. Clear targets have today also been set to ensure panels and committees are diverse. Today's work shows the NIHR's continuing determination to address EDI issues over the next few years.

In September 2022, the NIHR published its Equality, Diversity and Inclusion (EDI) Strategy 2022-2027. The strategy commits to overcoming the inequalities highlighted by their diversity data reports. It will be accompanied by an action plan, published by the end of 2022. This plan commits the NIHR to a programme of work to address the issues identified by their diversity data. The diversity data report shows that on average there is 51% professional female representation on their committees and panels. This is on target. But there are variations in the level of female representation by programme that they would like to address. The report shows that professional people from ethnic minority groups are underrepresented [14%] on their committees and panels compared to people of white ethnicity. And the the proportion of professional committee and panel members who have declared a disability [3%] is low compared to non-disabled members.

NIHR have developed a strategy to ensure they deliver on their commitment to EDI, while improving the health and wealth of the nation. Their EDI strategy centres around five key themes: 1) Become a more inclusive funder of research; 2) Widen access and participation for greater diversity and inclusion; 3) Improve and invest in the NIHR talent pipeline; 4) Embed evidence-led diversity and inclusion approaches; and 5) Collaborate with partners for impact and sustainability.

Series of YouTube videos. The NIHR has collaborated with the Centre for Ethnic Health Research to offer tips and advice on designing and delivering health and care research that is sensitive to and inclusive of people from ethnic minority groups.

The NIHR Glossary has definitions of research terms developed with a panel of researchers and members of the public.

In England, there is a 19-year gap in healthy life expectancy between the most and least affluent areas of the country, with people in the most deprived neighbourhoods, certain ethnic minority and inclusion health groups getting multiple long-term health conditions 10 to 15 years earlier than the least deprived communities, spending more years in ill health and dying sooner. Two pressing and interconnected public health challenges are the rising number of people living with multiple conditions, and inequalities in health. This Collection explores the intersection of the two.

Opportunities for public involvement in NHS, public health and social care research. Public involvement in research is when the research is carried out with or by members of the public rather than 'to', 'about', or 'for' them. This includes, for example, working with research funders to prioritise research, offering advice as members of a project steering group, commenting on and developing research materials and undertaking research with research participants.

This guidance has been compiled for a wide audience, but in particular it will be of value to: 1) researchers who need to cost public involvement activities at any stage of the research process; 2) anyone in a professional role involved in costing public involvement, advising researchers on budgeting for involvement or who has an interest in the topic; 3) public contributors who want to know how their involvement in research is costed; 4) research advisors/ managers who provide guidance to the research community about involvement; 5) commissioners of research who invite funding applications from the research community; and 6) reviewers and panel members who appraise research projects with costed involvement activities.

This guidance is for researchers writing plain English summaries, and board and panel members including public reviewers. A plain English summary is a clear, brief summary of the research that has been written for members of the public, rather than researchers or professionals. It should be written clearly and simply, without jargon and with an explanation of any technical terms.

This guidance was developed jointly by the NHS Research and Development (R&D) Forum, the Health Research Authority and the National Institute for Health and Care Research (NIHR). This guidance concerns co-applicants in health and care research, including research relating to public health and social care.

Also published, for the first time by the NIHR, are data relating to the diversity of research participants. Having a diverse range of participants in randomised clinical trials is important. It ensures that the results do not leave out any group, and that treatments and findings apply to the whole population. The report is the first step in better understanding who participates in research. It collects diversity data from participants who took part in NIHR-funded studies. The data was drawn from 140 published papers in the NIHR journals library. It uses the 2011 census as a comparator to establish that:

The mean age of RCT participants ranges from 2 to 86 years of age.

For ethnicity, they are broadly in line with the diversity of the UK, with a total of 68 distinct ethnicity 'categories' recorded

For sex, when assessed across all RCTs, male and female participation was almost equal at 49% and 51% respectively.

The RDS provides support to health and social care researchers across England on all aspects of developing and writing a funding application, including research design, research methods, identifying funding sources and involving patients and the public. Advice is confidential and free of charge.

The NIHR Research Design Service (RDS) provides a national network of skilled advisers offering free and confidential advice to develop competitive funding applications for health and social care research.

The NIHR is keen to accelerate the pace at which research is carried out so that its benefits reach services and treatments, and the patients and public who use them more quickly. We want to make things simpler and faster for researchers and others who work with us, including public reviewers and committee members. Therefore, we have shortened and simplified the standard application form (SAF) which is used when research teams apply for funding from the NIHR. It is not all about being faster and simpler though, at the same time the NIHR is committed to actively and openly supporting and promoting equality, diversity and inclusion (EDI). We also want to ensure that we keep patients, carers, the public and service users at the heart of all of our work, not losing sight of active public involvement as we changed our SAF. Our SAF guidance now includes improved requirements and advice for EDI and patient, public involvement and engagement (PPIE).

We cultivate a culture of inclusion where diverse talent is leveraged to advance health discovery. American context.

For over two decades, NIH has required researchers to include women, members of racial and ethnic minority groups, and children in their work absent an acceptable scientific or ethical rationale for their exclusion. Now, for the first time, selected inclusion data on sex/gender and race/ethnicity are publicly available disaggregated for various research, condition, and disease areas. American context

Each tailored pack considers measures of health inequality that aim to support health systems identify areas of improvement in promoting equality and reducing health inequalities. By using these packs, together with other NHS RightCare packs and local intelligence, health systems will be able to ensure plans focus on those opportunities which have the potential to provide the biggest improvements in health outcomes and resource allocations and the biggest reductions in health inequalities.

The long term conditions packs contains data on a number of disease areas and elements of care. The pack is split by stages along a long term conditions pathway and enables a local health economy to look at an element, for example disease detection or prescribing, across multiple disease areas. The pack contains a number of new indicators not included in previous packs. It also includes case studies, tools and guidance to support CCGs to make improvements to long term conditions care in their local health economy.

NHS England and Public Health England have developed these pages to make it easier for organisations and the public to find information, resources and action being taken to reduce health inequalities in England.
Working closely with key stakeholders including NHS Digital, the Lesbian Gay Bisexual and Trans (LGBT) Foundation led the work to develop a Sexual Orientation Monitoring Information Standard on behalf of NHS England. The SOM information standard provides a consistent mechanism for recording the sexual orientation of all patients/service users aged 16 years across all health services in England. It will also cover local authorities with responsibilities for adult social care in all service areas where it may be relevant to record this data using a standardised format.
The 'Where to look' packs have been updated so that local health economies are basing decisions on more timely data. The main update has been the inclusion of 15/16 QOF data. Also, since publication of the October packs a number of data quality issues have been highlighted in the spend data of four CCGs. To ensure robustness of the comparisons made, the four affected CCGs have been replaced within their similar 10 peer groups by their next closest CCG. Some CCGs will therefore see a change to their headline opportunities slide. The updated packs also contain a new slide highlighting the potential overuse in bed days. Health economies are able to use this information to focus on the opportunity to free up bed capacity, and ask the questions 'Is this current bed use adding value?' and 'Where might we better use this capacity and resource?'
Gender dysphoria is a condition where a person experiences discomfort or distress because there's a mismatch between their biological sex and gender identity. It's sometimes known as gender incongruence. Biological sex is assigned at birth, depending on the appearance of the genitals. Gender identity is the gender that a person "identifies" with or feels themselves to be.

In this study, the researchers found that the delivery of safe and equitable person-centred care requires a model of mental health that is responsive to the lived experiences of people in ethnic minority groups. For the people considered in this review, this requires better alignment of mental health services with social and anti-racist models of care. Their findings suggest that intersections related to experiences of racism, migration, religion, and complex trauma might be more relevant than crude ethnic group classifications. Strategies to tackle ethnic inequalities in mental healthcare require an evaluation of individual, systemic, and structural obstacles to authentic and meaningful coproduction and implementation of existing community recommendations in services. This website is a place where you can explore spirituality - the idea that there's something beyond the material world that is meaningful, magical and inspirational.

There are Spiritualist groups all around the country, many of them small independent organisations and some are part of associations or larger groups. However, what most Spiritualist Churches and organisations have in common is a welcoming, non-judgemental attitude. Spiritualism doesn't tell you what to believe and therefore there are many different and interesting views out there. While they are all valuable, it is important to take time to reflect on your own beliefs and find your own faith. What is common throughout Spiritualism is a belief that there is life after death and that communication with the Spirit world is possible.
The primary purpose of the Spiritualist Association of Great Britain is to offer evidence through Mediumship of the continuation of the personality after physical death, and to relieve suffering through Spiritual Healing.

The STRIDE project involved discussion in late 2022/early 2023 with ten panels of public contributors, trialists, health professionals and others. These panels discussed a total of 23 trials with the aim of saying which ethnic groups the trials needed to include and what proportion of the trial population they should be. While considering a particular trial, panels sometimes provided advice on how a trial team might have answered the question about the ethnic groups to be included. Additionally, having listened to ideas and suggestions from many individuals and panels across multiple trials and disease areas, the STRIDE team itself reflected on what might be useful advice for trial teams grappling with how to decide which ethnic groups their trial needs. This led to eight recommendations.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) is a milestone document in the history of human rights. Drafted by representatives with different legal and cultural backgrounds from all regions of the world, the Declaration was proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly in Paris on 10 December 1948 (General Assembly resolution 217 A) as a common standard of achievements for all peoples and all nations. It sets out, for the first time, fundamental human rights to be universally protected and it has been translated into over 500 languages.

This report sets out what has been done to protect human rights in Great Britain since the last report in 2017. It covers 11 different areas of life, including health, education, work and justice, liberty and personal security. It also gives recommendations to the UK and Welsh governments on how to better protect human rights and fulfil their international obligations. This report from the EHRC for the United Nations (UN), looks at how human rights are being upheld in the UK. The report is part of the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) process – when UN countries review each other's progress on putting human rights into practice. Recommendations include ensuring that any reform of the Human Rights Act does not weaken protections for individuals, that social care policy - including proposed reforms - measurably enhances the rights of people with care needs, and that more effort is made to tackle gaps in educational attainment across protected characteristic groups.
